

Irish in Britain Seminar Series 2011

10 - 31 May 2011

The recent upturn in Irish migration indicates that Britain continues to be one of the primary destinations of Irish migrants into the 21st Century. This year's seminar series covers a broad range of research in the field and aims to put current trends into their wider historical and political context.

10 May, Dr. Jennifer Redmond, National University of Ireland, Maynooth
Fight or Flight: The Irish in Britain in World War Two

17 May, Prof. Mary J Hickman, London Metropolitan University
Diaspora space, national (re)formations and Irish immigration to Britain and the USA

24 May, Dr. Marc Scully, Open University
'It's not as if I'm a "fake" Irish person': 'Authenticity' and the Irish in England

31 May, Whitney Standlee, University of Liverpool
'Making Rebels': Home Rule Politics and the Novels of Diasporic Irish Women in Britain

The Irish Studies Centre has provided a forum for teaching, learning and research since 1986. The Irish in Britain Seminar Series offers an informal but informative forum for students, researchers and scholars to debate and disseminate the latest research on Ireland, migration and the diaspora.

Seminars will take place on Tuesday evenings between 6.30 – 8.00 p.m.
