Career History

Clive Jones is the Chairman of Netplay, the interactive television company, Sticky Moon, the new media technology and design company, Energetic Communications, the New York marketing and events company and the Wales IP Fund. He is the sole non-executive director of S4C, the Welsh public service broadcaster. He has just completed a five year term as chairman of GMTV, Britain's most popular breakfast television station.

Until he stepped down in 2007, he was the Chief Executive of ITV News and Regions and the longest serving senior executive in ITV. During his thirty two year career in television he has been Managing Director of the ITV Network, CEO of Carlton Television, Managing Director of Central Television and Managing Director of London News Network. He began his career on the news desk of Yorkshire Television after eight years as a newspaper journalist.

As a consultant he chaired the Peer Review of the UK Film Council for the DCMS and was the project leader overseeing the digitisation of the ITV and Channel Four newsrooms for ITN. He is currently advising a group of Britain's leading theatres on their new media and digital ventures.

A graduate of the London School of Economics, he has chaired Skillset, the sector skills council for television, film, publishing and new media for the past eight years. He also chairs Mediabox, the Government's youth media fund, the Creative Diploma Development Partnership for the DCFS and the Runnymede Trust, Britain's leading diversity think tank. He sits on the board of the Young Vic Theatre and the Legacy Trust.

He founded and chaired for its first two years the ground breaking Cultural Diversity Network. He was awarded a Fellowship of the Royal Television Society in 1995 and its Gold Medal, the Society's highest award, in 2007. In the same year he was awarded a CBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours List for services to broadcasting. He is married to Vikki Heywood, the managing director of the Royal Shakespeare Company.
