

Adaption and exhaustion: Delivering support services remotely

Professor Liz Kelly and SelmaTaha

Abstract:

This presentation links contract research in CWASU and an MA dissertation. The first section will present the creative ways in which services funded under the Lottery Women and Girls Initiative adapted to remote delivery and reflect on the learnings. The second part draws on interviews with 15 frontline workers and asks at what and whose cost have services been maintained and even expanded over the last 15 months.
